

The American Society of Hematology Mentor Award

The ASH Mentor Award was created to recognize outstanding people whose mentorship has had an impact on individuals from all branches of hematology. Drawing from the areas of basic science, clinical investigation, education, or clinical/community care, two mentors will be honored for their dedication to fostering the success of others. Eligible honorees will have had a sustained career commitment to mentoring and a significant positive impact on their mentees' careers.

Award Criteria

This award is based on the training experiences and success of the nominee's mentees, not the mentor's personal career achievements. For the purpose of this award, mentoring is defined as the process of guiding, supporting, and promoting the training and career development of others. Nominations are reviewed and scored on the following criteria: 1) intellectual growth and development, 2) career development, 3) professional guidance, 4) advocacy, and 5) being a role model. Each of these criteria are scored individually, therefore the nomination should provide sufficient detail and specific examples that speaks to each of these elements in order for the nomination to fare well in the review.

The American Society of Hematology Mentor Award

Provided are some examples of questions that should be answered within the nomination packet to provide the level of detail the study section expects in reviewing submissions for the Mentor Award. Please note this list is not complete, simply examples for you to use in preparing your nomination:

- Most of the nominations received are for outstanding candidates. Therefore, please provide details on what distinguishes your mentor from the others.
- Are there specific examples where the mentor remained involved in your professional development, or that of other mentees, on an on-going basis, after your career was started? Was there a difference in support for those that stayed at the mentor's institution compared with those that went elsewhere?
- How does your mentor handle stress, disappointment, or setbacks involving his/her mentees? Describe the environment/atmosphere your mentor provides.
- How has your mentor intervened to help you make specific decisions regarding the path of your career? How helpful is your mentor in negotiating job offers, both at the home institution as well as others?
- How does your mentor balance things in their own lives from your perspective and how does he/she promote this balance for their mentees?

Nomination Process - The Nomination form and supporting materials are due by April 4, 2013.

1. Nominators must complete the nomination form and include the following:
 - Three letters of recommendation
 - ❖ A letter written by the nominator that summarizes the nominee's impact on the training/careers of his/her mentees.
 - ❖ Letters written by the primary and secondary mentee (can be a former or current mentee) who can provide a first hand account of how the nominee influenced his or her career. Academic, clinical, educational, and regulatory achievements on the part of the mentee will all be considered as important.
 - The nominee's curriculum vitae.
2. Up to three additional letters of support from junior and senior faculty will be accepted.
3. Final selections will be based on a review of all nominations received and a consensus of the Mentor Award Study Section.
